Confronting The Future Templar Impulses in the 21st Century

Emerson College, August 16th to August 22nd 2009

The Order of the Knights Templar continues to hold an extraordinary fascination for people. It originated (c.1118) with a few knights living for several years on the site of Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem. What they did there remains the subject of intense interest and speculation. Some claim the Knights discovered there all the secrets of the Temple of Solomon; others that they achieved a successful union of Islam, Judaism and Christianity. Rudolf Steiner furthered our questioning by saying: 'The Knights Templar built a centre of wisdom on the site of Solomon's Temple and after preparation were initiated there by the Holy Grail.' (Lecture - 1904)

The Order gained immense influence across Europe - spiritually, culturally, socially and economically. 700 years ago (1307-1314) King Philip the Fair of France violently put an end to the Order, extracting dubious confessions under extreme torture, leading to many knights being burned at the stake.

The importance of the Knights Templar, however, is by no means merely historical. Rudolf Steiner also described how: 'after their terrible experiences on the rack, the souls of the Templars who had passed through death were able to send down from the spiritual world streams of spiritual life for those who lived in the succeeding centuries'. (2.10.1916) The extreme opposition to the Templars has, likewise, continued to evolve, and has exerted an increasing influence on modern culture.

The aim of this conference, by intense exploration of and participation in the destiny of the Knights Templar, is to open up true perspectives into history, to develop active discernment into the challenges of the present, and to make a living connection to the sources of future renewal and inspiration.

THE CONFERENCE

There will be a morning lecture every day before coffee, followed by morning workshops. We will then have a long lunch break before the afternoon artistic workshops. In the evenings there will be either a lecture or an artistic performance. There will also be forums for questions and open conversation. In the middle of the week there will be an optional excursion to the Templar site of Shipley, West Sussex. (Small fee for transport.)

'In the evolution and destiny of the Templars we see an impulse that is of importance for all the succeeding centuries of the modern era.' Rudolf Steiner
